CHRISTMAS TREE LEGENDS.

ORIGIN OF THE CUSTOM LOST IN THE MAZE OF UNCERTAINTY.

Many Nations Now Claim It-Scandinavian, German, French and Other Legends of More or Less Authenticity.

From the New York Herald.

Nearly every Christian nation claims the honor of having given to the world the custom of the Christmas tree. Yet its origin is so obscure that no man may rightly may whence or when the beautiful usage began. A Scandinavian myth of great antiquity speaks of a "service tree" sprung from the blood drenched soil where two lovers had been killed by violence in their innocence. At certain nights in the Christmas season mysterious lights were seen flaming in its branches, that no wind could

The French have their legend as well. In a romance of the thirteenth century the hero finds a gigantic tree whose branches are covered with burning candles, some standing erect, the others upside down, and on the top the vision of a child, with a halo around his curly head. The knight asked the pope for an explanation, who declared that the tree undoubtedly represented mankind, the child the Savior, and the candles good and bad human beings.

Wolfram von Eichenbach, the famour minstrel, sings of a prevailing custom of welcoming guests with branches ornamented with burning candles.

One tale bestows the honor upon Martin Luther. One Christmas eve, traveling alone over the snow covered country, the sky, with its thousands of glittering stars, made such a deep impression upon the reformer that after arriving at home,he tried to explain it to his wife and children. Suddenly an idea suggested itself to him. He went into the garden, cut off a little fir tree drawged it into the nursery, but some candles on its branches and lighted them. The most beautiful legend is of German origin and comes from that borderland of history between pagan and Christian days: "'Hearken, ye sons of the forest! No blood shall flow this night save that which pity has drawn from a mother's breast. For this is the birth night of the white Christ, the son of the All-Father, the Sav-lor of mankind. Fairer is He than Baldur the Beautiful, greater than Odin the Wise kinder than Freya the Good. Since he has come sacrifice is ended. The dark Thor on whom ye have vainly called, is dead. Deep in the shades of Niffelbeim he is lost forever. And now on this Christ night ye shall begin to live. This Blood tree shall darken your land no more. In the name of the Lord I will destroy it."

"He grasped the broad ax from the hand of Gregor, and, striding to the oak, began to hew against it. Then the sole wonder in Winfrid's life came to pass. For, as the bright blade circled above his head, and the flakes of wood flew from the deepening gash in the body of the tree, a whirling wind passed over the forest. It gripped th oak from its foundations. Backward it fell like a tower, groaning as it split asunder in four pieces. But just behind it, and unharmed by the ruin, stood a young fir tree. pointing a green spire toward the stars. "Winfrid let the ax drop, and turned to speak to the people.

"This little tree, a young child of the forest, shall be your holy tree to-night. It is the wood of peace, for your houses are built of the fir. It is the sign of an endless life, for its leaves are ever green. See how it points upward to heaven. Let this be called the tree of the Christ-child; gather about it, not in the wild wood, but in your own homes; there it will shelter no eds of blood, but loving gifts and rites of kindness." 'So they took the tree from its place and carried it in joyful procession to the edge of the glade and laid it on one of the drew bravely at his load, as if the new burden had lightened it. When they came to the village Alvoid bade them open the doors of his great hall and set the tree in the midst of it."

In History.

Historically, the Christmas tree can only be traced back to the sixteenth century. During the middle ages it suddenly appears in Strassburg. A valuable authentic manuscript of 166, by a Strassburg burgher, now in a private collection in Freidberg. Hes sen, describes the holidays very much as we are used to celebrate them. The manuscript of a book entitled "The Milk of Catechism," by the Strassburg theologian Danhauser, mentions the same subject in a similar way. During the next 200 year the Christmas tree could only be met along the Rhine, when suddenly, at the begin-ning of this century, the habit spread all over Germany, and fifty years later had conquered the world.

The first description of a Christmas tree in modern literature is to be found in "The Nuteracker," a fairy tale, by Fougue and

In 1830 the Christmas tree was introduced by Queen Caroline in Munich. At the same time it best its path through Bohemia into Hungary, where it became fash ionable among the Magyar aristocracy. Brought to the Tuileries.

In 1840 the Duchess Helena of Orleans brought it to the Tuileries, but it took many years before it became popular in France. Empress Eugenie also natronized sidered an intruder of Alsatian origin. In 1888 the German residents of Paris could procure a Christmas tree but with the greatest difficulty. However, nine year later they were regularly sold in the mar ket. In 1870 the German army celebrate Christmas in the city of Notre Dame, and to-day Paris uses 50,000 trees each year, of which only about the fourth part are bought by Swiss, Germans atlans. The French plant the entirtree, with its root in a tub, so as to be able

Also London became acquainted with the habit through the royal palace. The prince consert brought it to St. James and it was quickly adopted by the nobility and well-to-do citizens. Also in other Englis cities it is frequently met with, though it a different manner. Immediately after din-ner a little fir tree is handed round the table, with a present of the host to each Scotch and Irish children know but little of the enjoyment a Christmas to preserve the tree until New Year, when rise is sure to bring.

At the beginning of our century the custom was entirely unknown in Scandinavia holds with fir tree branches. On the Isl ands I ago and Worms the inhabitants pur five little candles on every branch of the Christmas tree, which is known to them al-

In America is has been introduced and quickly spread by the sturdy German emi-grant, and of late years has become a universal custom.
